Sorry for the late reply.

The theme for this site, which is a Tiki version of the Mittwoch theme for Joomla, will be available pretty soon. There is a bug that prevents the third column from displaying in IE6. As soon that's fixed, I'll package up the files and put them on themes.tikiwiki.org for downloading. There will be documentation at that site also about the theme's features, etc. I think template and page source viewing is already turned on there, but I'll check.

You are welcome; the themes are a fun project and I'm glad people find them useful.

I came across this when I tried to look at the source code of the home page. I can view and could even modify the doc-pages.

Where do I find the templates?

Andreas

The links to see templates are on tiki-edit_templates.php. But it looks like these are just the files in the templates/ and templates/modules directories, and not any theme-specific template versions. So there's nothing to see that can't be seen in a standard Tiki download package. (Template editing is turned off at themes.tw.o.)

The template files for the Mittwoch theme will be in a file gallery at themes.tw.o when they are ready.
